

Reasoning narrows both gaps; scale is a different story

Flatter = smaller penalty; 1x = parity with English. Ticks mark the observed languages.

Risk ratios depend on the base rate they are measured against, so the size rows are not directly comparable: at 32B the English error rate is ~7%, inflating the ratio. The fitted interaction, estimated on the odds scale, has scale REDUCING the resource penalty (see the odds-scale figure).

